

The red squirrel is smaller than the gray, and has a more restricted diet and habitat. Reds may also die from the squirrel parapoxvirus, which is carried by the grays but does not affect them.