The effects of human activity on biodiversity

Edward Wilson devised the acronym HIPPO for the five human-made threats most harmful to Earth's biodiversity, with their severity reflected in the order of the letters. Another threat that may soon become a primary danger to biodiversity is climate change.

Read accessible description