

A tortoiseshell butterfly feeds on a dandelion. Most butterflies can angle their wings upward in an attempt to cool down, in a process called behavioral thermoregulation.