and the introduction of nonindigenous species, can damage trophic cascades is vital in shaping conservation measures today.

Steller's sea cow was a giant sirenian discovered by the naturalist Georg Steller in 1741. Its extinction is the cause of debate: was it hunted to death, or did its food source disappear?

---

"Herbivores are usually expected to be well fed and carnivores are usually expected to be hungry."

Lawrence Slobodkin

---