

Log decomposition is being studied over a 200-year period at six old-growth forest sites in Andrews Forest, Oregon. The experiment began in 1985.