

Satellite images enable ecologists to observe large-scale changes easily. The green areas in this image of the Caspian Sea are evidence of algal growth—the product of nutrient enrichment.