

“Flowering stones” (Lithops) are native to southern Africa, with thick, fleshy leaves well suited to dry, rocky conditions. Related species also occur in similar arid habitats in the US.