

Earthworms leave castings that make them valuable natural fertilizers. They not only transform the soil for themselves but also help plants to grow.