

Glaciers converge on Piz Argient, a mountain in the Swiss Alps. Like others in the Alps, these glaciers were once much more extensive than they are now, and they continue to shrink.