

The Perito Moreno glacier in Patagonia was until 2018 considered relatively stable, but is now one of many, many glaciers that are melting, causing sea levels to rise worldwide.

See also: Environmental feedback loops • Renewable energy • The Green Movement • Halting climate change