

Over billions of years layers of cyanobacteria have fossilized to form stromatolites—mounds of sedimentary rock, as seen here at Hamelin Pool, Shark Bay, Western Australia.

“I look forward with great optimism. We live in a transition to the noosphere.”

Vladimir Vernadsky