

Two peppered moths exhibit evolution at work, the lower one an example of industrial melanism. The dark variety began to appear in British cities in the early 1800s.