

A NASA image of the “ozone hole” over Antarctica in 2014. The blue area shows where there is least ozone. The amount of ozone in Earth’s stratosphere overall has stabilized since about 2000.