

Some bee species now emerge earlier in spring, in line with earlier flowering dates for the plants that they pollinate. Other bees, though, have not been able to synchronize their emergence.