

The remote, subalpine Mineral King Valley has survived the threat of development. It remains an ecosystem that aims to benefit all—following Aldo Leopold's "land ethic" principle.