

Mendel’s pea experiment.

In the parent generation, one green pea and one yellow pea are crossed.

The F1 generation produces all yellow peas, demonstrating that yellow is the dominant trait.

In the F2 generation, crossing yellow plants results in three yellow peas and one green pea, showing the 3:1 ratio of dominant to recessive traits.

BACK TO ARTICLE