1949. In Man Meets Dog, Konrad Lorenz describes the instinctive behaviour of animals and its evolutionary origins.

1960. Jane Goodall sets up a camp in Tanzania to research chimpanzees in the wild, discovering many traits shared by humans.

1981. Insect Thermoregulation by Bernd Heinrich explains how insects are able to control their own temperature.

2005 to 2011. The first gene mapping confirms that humans share 97 to 99 per cent of their DNA with the other great apes.

2007. In the US, the Human Microbiome Project is launched, to map all the microbes associated with a healthy human body.

2014. The World Health Organisation published the first global report on antimicrobial resistance, highlighting it as a global health security threat.

BACK TO ARTICLE