

Islands are surrounded by water.

The water acts as a physical barrier, preventing many species from entering or leaving.

As species arrive and depart, island populations evolve.

Islands are ecological systems.

BACK TO ARTICLE