

Plants grow according to their individual needs.

There is no evidence of integrated development between plants.

They grow randomly, influenced only by the environmental conditions.

An ecological community is not an organism.

BACK TO ARTICLE