

Scientific study often relies on the collection of large quantities of data.

The more data, the more representative the results are of reality.

Volunteer networks are able to collect vast quantities of data, often from widespread areas.

The citizen’s network depends on volunteers.

BACK TO ARTICLE