

1858. During the Industrial Revolution, London’s “Great Stink” prompts legislation to curb air and water pollution.

1859. Rabbits are released in Australia; their population explosion results in chaos for the environment.

1872. The world’s first national park is created in the US at Yellowstone to preserve its natural habitat.

1955. The term “urban sprawl” is used for the first time, by The Times newspaper in the UK.

1958. Charles Keeling starts to record the year-on-year rise in atmospheric carbon dioxide levels.

1962. Rachel Carson’s book Silent Spring exposes the harmful effects of pesticides on the