1966. Lynn White argues that Western, largely Christian, anthropocentric worldviews have placed humankind in an environmental crisis.

1971. UNESCO launch their Man and the Biosphere Programme to encourage economic development that is sustainable and eco-friendly.

1987. The Indian NGO Navdanya (“Nine seeds”) is founded, to preserve seed diversity, promote fair trade, and protect farmers.

1988. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change is established in Geneva, Switzerland.

1991. The Sustainable Biosphere Initiative (SBI) report, published in the US, argues for increased funding for ecological research.

1992. The UN’s Rio Earth Summit sets global targets for cutting greenhouse gas emissions.

1997. Gretchen Daily’s Ecosystem Services shows how humans can derive benefits from preserving the natural environment.