2. Macaulay's minute on education.
3. The Sargent Education Report
4. Indian Education (Hunter Commission)

(a) 2, 1, 4, 3 (b) 2, 1, 3, 4
(c) 1, 2, 4, 3 (d) 4, 3, 1, 2

Ans. (a) : On 19 July 1854, Charles Wood, head of the Interpretation Board of Control, presented a comprehensive plan on Indian education, which was called 'Wood's Dispatch'. In this proposal, views on the purpose, medium, reforms etc. of education were expressed. This manifesto was also called the Magna Carta of Indian Education. Emphasis was also given on giving grant-in-aid in the manifesto. According to the proposal, arrangements were made to establish one university each in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras on the model of the University of London. Macaulay laid more emphasis on English education in India. The Hunter Commission was appointed in 1882 to review the progress made in education through Wood's manifesto. This commission consisted of 8 members. The suggestions of the commission were as follows: emphasis on providing vocational and business education at the high school level, secondly, private efforts should be welcomed in the field of such literary education. In 1944, the Central Education Advisory Board presented the Sargent Education Plan, in which there was a provision to establish primary schools, higher secondary schools and to provide free compulsory education to the children of 6 to 11 years of age.
