(ii) Agreement on rapid industrialisation for which both the plans agreed upon an emphasis on heavy capital goods and basic industries (the Bombay Plan had allocated 35 per cent of its total plan outlay on basic industries).

(iii) Taking clues from the Soviet Planning, the NPC and the Bombay Plan both were in favour of a simultaneous development of the essential consumer goods industries but as a low-key affair.

(iv) Both the Plans agreed upon the importance of promoting the medium-scale, small-scale and cottage industries as they could provide greater employment and require lesser capital and lower order of plants and machineries.

(v) Both the Plans wanted the state to play an active role in the economy through planning, controlling and overseeing the different areas of the economy i.e. trade, industry, banking through state ownership (public sector) or through direct and extensive control over them.

(vi) Large-scale measures for social welfare were favoured by both the plans which suggested to be based on issues like, right to work and full employment, the guarantee of a minimum wage, greater state expenditure on housing, water and sanitation, free education, social insurance to cover unemployment and sickness and provision of utility services such as electricity and transportation at a low cost through state subsidies.

(vii) Both the Plans agreed upon a planning which could do away with the gross inequalities. Through measures like progressive taxation, and prevention of concentration of wealth. Inequality was considered undesirable as it tended to restrict the domestic market.

The Gandhian Plan

Espousing the spirit of the Gandhian economic thinking, Sriman Narayan Agarwal formulated this plan in 1944. This plan laid more emphasis on agriculture. Even if he referred to industrialisation it was to the level of promoting cottage and village-level industries, unlike the NPC and the Bombay Plan which supported a leading role for the heavy and large
