economies who are signatories to the process of globalisation (i.e. signatories to the WTO) for them there will be nothing like foreign or indigenous goods and services, capital and labour. The world becoming flat and level-playing field emerging in the due process of time.[28]

For many political scientists (which is today a very dominant force in the world), globalisation is the emergence of a situation when our lives are increasingly shaped by the events that occur at a great distance from us about which the decisions are not taken by our conscious self. One section of experts believe that globalisation subordinates the state while the other section argues that the local, the national and global events constantly interact under it without any sfubordination of one by the other. Rather, globalisation highlights the deepening as well as broadening of the political process in this sense.[29]

India became one of the founding members of the WTO and was obliged to promote the process of globalisation, though its economic reforms started with no such obligation. It is a different thing that India started the process of globalisation right after the reforms were started in 1991, itself.[30]

Now we may connect the three simultaneous processes—the LPG with which India launched its reform programme. The process of liberalisation shows movement of the economy towards the market economy, privatisation is the path/route through which it will travel to realise the ultimate ‘goal’ i.e. globalisation.

It should be noted here that the Indian idea of globalisation is deeply and frequently inclined towards concept of the welfare state which keeps coming in the day to day public policy as an emphatic reference. The world, including the IMF, the WB and the developed nations have now increasingly shown their recognition to the fact that the official goal of globalisation of the world economies would not take place without giving the poor of the world a better standard of living. Even if globalisation is complete without including almost one-fifth of the world population, the poor, will it be called development of the world?
