economies as such compromises in socialistic economic order were blasphemous at that time (this was ultimately a suggestion towards democracy from dictatorship).

As Keynes has suggested the capitalist economy to move few steps towards socialistic economy, Prof. Lange was asking just the same in the case of the state economies. Democracies are flexible thus they were able to go for an experiment which paid them in coming times. But as the socialist and communist political systems had been stubborn by nature, they did not go for any experiment and thus started moving towards their economic decay.

It was the communist China under the leadership of Mao Tse Tung where the first opinion came against the total state economic control. And the ultimate example of the state economy (i.e., China) started its preparation towards a limited market economy under the political design of dictatorship. In 1985, China announced its ‘open door policy’, the first experiment in ‘market socialism’ — Prof. Lange had the last laugh. Other state economies, though caught unprepared, followed the Chinese experiment towards market socialism. However, switch over to market socialism has not been smooth for most of the state economies. The efforts towards market socialism in the Soviet Union, fuelled by the lofty ideas of ‘glasnost’ (openness) and ‘prestroika’ (restructuring), resulted in the very disintegration of the nation-state. The experts consider it ‘a political fallout of an economic mismanagement’. The other state economies experienced major economic breakdowns in their transition phases to market socialism. Basically, for smooth transition to market socialism some prerequisites were required to be put in place aforehand. China was well ahead doing this homework since Mao’s time (specially since 1975 onwards) which emerged as a real winner—the ideal type example of state economy getting smoothly (!) metamorphosed into giant market economy.

These two events spanning many decades were nothing but timely and rational selections of economic traits from each other’s economic systems and experiences. The world by the late 1980s was having neither a pure example of capitalistic economy nor a pure example of state economy.

There were many states of the world that opted for mixed economy in the post-Second World War periods after coming out of the colonial rule such as India, Malaysia, Indonesia, etc. to name a few. The leadership of these
