attend the non-material part of happiness. The non-material part of our life is rooted in ethics, religion, spiritualism and cultural values. As development or human development was defined in material terms, it could only deliver us material happiness which is visibly available in the developed world. Due to partial definition of development the developed world has been able to achieve development i.e. happiness but only of material kind and for the non-material part of happiness we, naturally need to redefine our idea of development today or tomorrow!

Somehow a very small kingdom had been able to define development in its own way which included material as well as non-material aspects of life into it and named it the Gross National Happiness (GNH)—it was Bhutan!

Gross National Happiness Bhutan, a small Himalayan kingdom and an economic non-entity developed a new concept of development in early 1970s—the Gross National Happiness (GNH). Without rejecting the idea of human development propounded by the UNDP, the kingdom has been officially following the targets set by the GNH. Bhutan has been following up the GNH since 1972 which has the following parameters to attain happiness/development:

(i) Higher real per capita income.

(ii) Good Governance.

(iii) Environmental Protection.

(iv) Cultural Promotion (i.e. inculcation of ethical and spiritual values in life without which, it says, progress may become a curse rather than a blessing).

At the level of real per capita income, the GNH and the HDI are the same. Though the HDI is silent on the issue of ‘good governance’, today it should be considered as being promoted around the world once the World Bank came with its report on it in 1995 and enforced it upon the member states. On the issue of protecting environment though the HDI didn’t say anything directly the World Bank and the UNO had already accepted the immediacy of sustainable development by then and by early 1990s there was a seperate UN Convention on the matter (follow up on this convention has been really very low till date which is a different issue).
