1 Timothy, 87, 88, 94, 198
totalitarian computer politics, 348–60 algorithmic takeover threat and, 354–58 alignment problem and, 352
  blockchain technology and, 350–51
  bots and, 352
  centralisation of power and, 348–50, 354–58
  computers as independent agents and, 354–56 doublespeak and, 352–53
  erasure of past and, 353–54
  infallibility and, 358–60
  surveillance and, 350
totalitarianism
  absence of self-correcting mechanisms in, 119, 179–80 ancient experiments, 156–60
  vs. autocracies, 118–19, 154–56
  bureaucracy and, 169, 170
  centralisation of power and, 118–19, 157, 176–77, 348–50, 354–58
  control and, 164–67
  current extent of, 348, 467*n*2
  disadvantages of, 177–78, 180–85, 187–89
  family and, 171–72
  human abuse of power and, xii Industrial Revolution and, 307 information technology and, 153–54, 157, 159, 160, 169, 185–86, 227, 348–49 naive view of information on, xvii populism and, 129, 132
  power of, xiv–xv
  religious institutions and, 173–76 resistance to, 166–67
  revolutionary purpose of, 174, 175, 314 secret police under, 161, 162, 163 Silicon Curtain and, 375
  state–party cooperation and, 173–74
  surveillance and, 162, 231–34, 239, 245, 247, 256–58, 350
  systems of, 161–63