bypassed by the Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty (SORT), agreed to by Presidents George W. Bush and Vladimir Putin at their summit meeting in November 2001. It was signed at the Moscow Summit on 24 May 2002. Both sides agreed to reduce by 2012, the operationally deployed strategic nuclear warheads from the existing number to 1,700–2,200.

14. Chemical Weapons Agreement, 1993: The Agreement was signed in Paris on 13 January 1993 and came into force on 29 April 1997.

Article I provides the general obligations of this Treaty. It states that each state Parties to this Convention undertakes never, under any circumstances to:

(a) Develop, produce, otherwise acquire, stockpile or retain chemical weapons, or transfer, directly or indirectly, chemical weapons to anyone.

(b) Use chemical weapons.

(c) Engage in any military preparations to use chemical weapons.

(d) Assist, encourage or induce, in any way, anyone to engage in any activity prohibited to a state Party under this Convention.

Article I also provides that each state Parties should undertake to destroy chemical weapons it owns or possesses, or that are located in any place under its jurisdiction or control, in accordance with the provisions of this Convention. Simultaneously, it also contains provisions that each state Party must undertake to destroy all chemical weapons it has abandoned on the territory of another state Parties, in accordance with the provisions of this Convention, any chemical weapons production facilities it owns or those possesses, or those that are located in any place under its jurisdiction or control, in accordance with the provisions of this Convention and refrains itself from using riot control agents as a method of warfare.

15. Indefinite Extension of NPT, 1995: On 11 May 1995, at a Global Conference held to review the NPT, the state Parties to the Treaty agreed by consensus and without formal dissent that the Treaty would continue in force permanently and unconditionally. The extension of NPT, however, legitimized the possession of nuclear weapons by the five nuclear powers. India, Pakistan and Israel still