1994	A ceasefire agreement is signed between the Kachin Independence Army (KIA) and the government.
1995	Aung San Suu Kyi is released from house arrest after six years.
1996	Aung San Suu Kyi attends the first NLD congress since her release from house arrest.
1997	The United States expands financial sanctions to include all new investments.
	Myanmar is granted admission to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).
	SLORC renames itself the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC).
1998	The SPDC releases 300 NLD members from prison.
2000	SPDC lifts restrictions on the movements of Aung San Suu Kyi and senior NLD members.
	Aung San Suu Kyi negotiates clandestinely with the SPDC.
2001	The Myanmar army and Shan rebels clash along the Thai border.
2002	General Than Shwe begins construction of the new capital, Naypyidaw, which means “abode of kings,” on a remote plain 200 miles north of Yangon.
	Aung San Suu Kyi released from house arrest after a period of 20 months.
2003	Aung San Suu Kyi taken into “protective custody” following clashes between the NLD and the government.
	Khin Nyunt becomes prime minister. He proposes to hold a constitutional convention in 2004 as part of the “road map to democracy.”
	U.S. President George W. Bush approves the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act, which bans the imports of Burmese goods and restricts American banks from doing business in Myanmar.
2004	The government and the Karen National Union agree to a ceasefire.
	The constitutional convention begins in May but is boycotted by the NLD. The convention is adjourned in July.
	Khin Nyunt is removed from his post as prime minister by SPDC chairman Than Shwe amid reports of a power struggle.
	Thousands of political prisoners are released, including leading dissidents of the 1988 pro-democracy student demonstrations.
	The 2004 Indian Ocean tsunami hits Myanmar's coastline reportedly killing 59 people and leaving more than 3,000 homeless.
2005	The NLD and ethnic groups boycott the constitutional convention after its resumption.