minister of labor in October 2007. Aung Kyi was appointed as SPDC's official liaison to Aung San Suu Kyi.

Aung San (1915–1947). Also known as Bo Te Za, he was the founder of the modern Burmese military and a leading political figure of the Burmese independence movement from 1935 to 1947. He is also considered the architect of the Union of Burma.

Aung San was born on February 13, 1915, in Natmouk, Magwe district in central Burma. His first involvement in politics was as a leader of the students strike at Rangoon University in 1936. He was elected president of the All Burma Students' Union from 1936 to 1938. In 1938, Aung San joined the Do Bama Asi Ayon students association and served as its secretary-general until 1940. He was also one of the Thirty Comrades who was sent by Do Bama Asi Ayon to receive Japanese military instruction before returning with the invading Japanese as the head of the Burmese Independence Army (BIA) in 1941. Aung San served as minister of defense from 1943 to 1945 in Ba Maw's newly proclaimed “independent” government. Cofounder of the Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League, he would later become deputy chairman of the executive council in 1946. Aung San was assassinated on July 19, 1947, in the council chamber in Rangoon.

Aung San Suu Kyi, Daw (1945–). She is the daughter of Burmese independence hero Aung San. She is the symbol of the Burmese democratic opposition and general secretary of the NLD. She rose to prominence as a leader of the democratic opposition during the 1988 Burmese Spring.

Aung San Suu Kyi was born on June 19, 1945 and was educated in Burma, India, and the United Kingdom. After living and working in Japan and Bhutan she went to Britain to raise her children. She returned to Burma in 1988 for family reasons and became involved in the Burmese democratic movement. Aung San Suu Kyi helped cofound the NLD on September 24, 1988. She spent most of the last two decades under house arrest for her efforts to bring democracy to Myanmar. On April 1, 2012, she stood and won the seat in the Kawhmu constituency in a parliamentary by-election.
