ending the Restored kingdom of Hanthawaddy. Alaùngpayà's son Hsinbyushin executed Binnya Dala in 1774.

Bodawpaya (1745–1819). He was also known as Bodaw U Waing and was the fourth son of Alaùngpayà, the founder of the dynasty, and the sixth king of the Konbaung dynasty; he reigned from 1782 to 1819. In 1783, he moved the capital from Inwa to Amarapura. The following year he invaded and annexed Arakan, making Arakan a province of Burma. Bodawpaya's oppressive rule in Arakan led to rebellion and his pursuit of rebels into British-controlled Bengal brought him into conflict with the British. In addition, his military campaigns into Assam heightened tensions with the British. He was also a fervent Buddhist who proclaimed himself Arimittya, the messianic Buddha destined to conquer the world.

Dhammazedi (1412–1492). He was the 16th king of Hanthawaddy Pegu; he reigned from 1472 to 1492. He is considered one of the most enlightened rulers in Burmese history. A former Buddhist monk, Dhammazedi became the de facto ruler following Queen Shinsawbu relinquishing monarchical duties. Dhammazedi unified and purified Therāvāda Buddhism in Pegu. In addition, he was responsible for establishing links with Ceylon.

Min Bin (??–??). He was also known as Ma Pa and was the 12th king of the Mrauk-U dynasty; he ruled from 1531 to 1553. During his reign Arakan reached the height of its power. He forged ties with the Portuguese that enabled Mrauk-U to extend suzerainty over eastern Bengal and defeat an invasion by the Burmese King Tabinshweti.

Min Ko Naing (1962–). Nom de guerre of Paw Oo Tun, he was one of the most prominent student leaders in the pro-democracy uprising of 1988. A third-year university student at the Rangoon Arts and Science University, Min Ko Naing rose to prominence as an advocate for human rights in Burma during the student-led demonstrations. In March 1989, he was arrested and sentenced to 20 years imprisonment for his role in the pro-democracy movement. On November 19, 2004, Min Ko Naing was released
