U Thant (1909–1974). Also known as Pantanow, U Thant is best known as the third secretary-general of the United Nations; he served from November 30, 1961, to December 31, 1971. He was chosen secretary-general following the death of Dag Hammarskjold in an air crash in the Congo. Prior to his appointment as secretary-general, U-Thant was a civil servant in the newly independent Burma.

U Thant was appointed as director of broadcasting in 1947 and then as the secretary to the government of Burma in the Ministry of Information the following year. He was appointed the secretary for projects in the Office of the Prime Minister in 1953. From 1957 to 1961, U Thant was Burma's Permanent Representative to the United Nations, with the rank of ambassador. In 1959, he served as one of the vice presidents of the Assembly's 14th session. In 1961, U Thant was chairman of the United Nations Congo Reconciliation Commission. He was appointed as acting secretary-general on November 3, 1961, by the General Assembly. U Thant was unanimously appointed secretary-general by the General Assembly on November 30, 1962. He was reappointed for a second term as secretary-general by the General Assembly on December 2, 1966. His term of office ended on December 31, 1971.

Wareru (1252–1307). Also called Mogado, he was the king of Hanthawaddy Pegu who ruled over Burma from 1287 to 1296. Wareru was a Shan chief who married a daughter of the King Ramkhamhaeng of Sukhotai who managed to become ruler of Martaban in 1281. Following the Mongol sacking of Bagan in 1287, Wareru and the Mon prince of Hanthawaddy Pegu, Tarabya, pushed the Burman back to Upper Burma. Once in control of Lower Burma, Wareru had Tarabya assassinated and declared himself king.

Yan Naing, Bo (1918–1989). Nom de guerre of Tun Shein Ko, he was one of the “Thirty Comrades” and son-in-law of Ba Maw. Yan Naing was active in prewar student movement. He rose to prominence as the commander of the BIA fighting the British at the battle of Shwedaung in 1942. Following World War II Yan Naing was involved in politics. He joined the U-Nu's exiled Parliamentary Democracy Party in 1969 and