	Myanmar turns down the rotating ASEAN chairmanship for 2006.
	The government moves the capital to a site near town of Pyinmana.
2006	Construction of the new capital, Naypyidaw, is completed at the cost of several hundred millions of dollars.
2007	Myanmar and North Korea restore diplomatic ties.
	The government extends Aung San Suu Kyi's house arrest for another year.
	The military government declares constitutional talks complete and closes the national convention.
	In what is called the Saffron Revolution, Buddhist monks lead a series of protests against the government in Yangon to protest the deteriorating economic conditions in Myanmar. Aung San Suu Kyi meets demonstrating monks. The government cracks down on protests, but the demonstrations continue.
	SPDC reasserts control over Yangon, arresting thousands of Buddhist monks.
	The United Nations General Assembly approves a resolution condemning the government actions and asks for the release of political prisoners.
2008	The SPDC drafts a new constitution and calls for new elections in 2010. The new constitution is set for a national referendum on May 10.
	Tropical cyclone Nargis hits Myanmar leaving over 134,000 dead or missing and causing widespread devastation in the Ayeyarwaddy River delta.
	Tens of millions of dollars in aid are pledged to the survivors of cyclone Nargis. A total of 78,000 are estimated to have died and another 56,000 missing. The government estimates economic damages at about US$11 billion.
	The SPDC extends Aung San Suu Kyi's detention by another year.
	Myanmar's state-run newspaper said the overwhelming election victory by Aung San Suu Kyi's party in 1990 has been nullified by the approval of a military-backed constitution and the NLD should prepare for new elections in 2010.
2009	Thailand expels hundreds of members of Myanmar's Muslim Rohingya minority who appeared off its coast. Myanmar denies the Rohingyas' existence.
	United Nations envoy Ibrahim Gambari meets with Aung San Suu Kyi.
	A UN report said Myanmar faces food shortages because of last year's cyclone.
	The NLD offers to take part in elections in exchange for the release of all political prisoners and changes in the constitution.
	Aung San Suu Kyi's house arrest is extended for an additional 18 months following a conviction for breaching the terms of her confinement when