As noted in the introduction, this book has been written in conversation with the public. Many of the chapters were composed in response to questions I was asked by readers, journalists and colleagues. Earlier versions of some segments were previously published as essays and articles, which gave me the opportunity to receive feedback and hone my arguments. These earlier versions include the following essays and articles:

‘If We Know Meat Is Murder, Why Is It So Hard For Us to Change and Become Moral?’, Haaretz, 21 June 2012.

‘The Theatre of Terror’, Guardian, 31 January 2015.

‘Judaism Is Not a Major Player in the History of Humankind’, Haaretz, 31 July 2016.

‘Yuval Noah Harari on Big Data, Google and the End of Free Will’, FT.com, 26 August 2016.

‘Isis is as much an offshoot of our global civilisation as Google’, Guardian, 9 September 2016.

‘Salvation by Algorithm: God, Technology and New 21st Century Religion’, New Statesman, 9 September 2016.

‘Does Trump’s Rise Mean Liberalism’s End?’, New Yorker, 7 October 2016.

‘Yuval Noah Harari Challenges the Future According to Facebook’, Financial Times, 23 March 2017.

‘Humankind: The Post-Truth Species’, Bloomberg.com, 13 April 2017.

‘People Have Limited Knowledge. What’s the Remedy? Nobody Knows’, New York Times, 18 April 2017.

‘The Meaning of Life in a World Without Work’, Guardian, 8 May 2017.

‘In Big Data vs. Bach, Computers Might Win’, Bloomberg View, 13 May 2017.

‘Are We About to Witness the Most Unequal Societies in History?’, Guardian, 24 May 2017.

‘Universal Basic Income is Neither Universal Nor Basic’, Bloomberg View, 4 June 2017.

‘Why It’s No Longer Possible For Any Country to Win a War’, Time.com, 23 June 2017.

‘The Age of Disorder: Why Technology is the Greatest Threat to Humankind’, New Statesman, 25 July 2017.

‘Reboot for the AI Revolution’, Nature News, 17 October 2017.