Acknowledgements

For their advice and assistance, thanks to: Sarai Aharoni, Dorit Aharonov, Amos Avisar, Tzafrir Barzilai, Katherine Beitner, Noah Beninga, Suzanne Dean, Tirza Eisenberg, Amir Fink, Einat Harari, Liat Harari, Pnina Harari, Sara Holloway, Benjamin Z. Kedar, Yossi Maurey, Eyal Miller, David Milner, John Purcell, Simon Rhodes, Shmuel Rosner, Rami Rotholz, Michal Shavit, Michael Shenkar, Ellie Steel, Ofer Steinitz, Claire Wachtel, Hannah Wood, Guy Zaslavsky and all the teachers and students in the World History programme of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

I am particularly indebted to Idan Sherer, my devoted research assistant, and to Haim Watzman, a master wordsmith, who enriched my English with style, punch and humor, and who helped hone my arguments for publication outside Israel.

Special thanks to Jared Diamond, who taught me to see the big picture; to Diego Olstein, who inspired me to write a story; and to Itzik Yahav and Deborah Harris, who helped spread the story around.