
KEY
HOLY LEAGUE FLEET
10 Christian galleys
2 Venetian galleasses
OTTOMAN FLEET
10 Ottoman galleys
The Christian left is commanded by Venetian Agostino Barbarigo
The Ottoman right is commanded by Suluc Mehmed Pasha
SCROPHA POINT
Small Ottoman reserve
The Ottomans advance in a crescent formation with Ali Pasha in the center
A reserve squadron under Spanish admiral Santa Cruz remains at the rear of the Christian line
The main Christian line is drawn up in three squadrons, with Don John of Austria in the center
The galleasses are towed toward the advancing Ottomans. Their guns launch a devastating hail of iron shot
The feared corsair Uluç Ali commands the Ottoman left
GULF OF PATRAS
1 THE FLEETS LINE UP
As the Christian galleys sail past Scropha Point and into the Gulf of Patras, the Ottoman fleet is sighted around 9 miles (14 km) to the east. The Ottoman galleys are more numerous than the Christian, but also smaller and less heavily armed.
The Christian right is commanded by Genoese Giovanni Andrea Doria
2 THE FLEETS ENGAGE
The guns of the huge Christian galleasses cause havoc as the two sides engage. The Ottoman wings attempt to outflank their Christian counterparts, while fierce battles develop as the galleys in the center close with the enemy.
SCROPHA POINT
The first clash takes place close to the coast as Suluc's light galiots attempt to outflank the Christian galleys by rowing through shallow water near the shore
As the fleets clash in the center, a crucial battle develops around the two flagships. Troops engage in fierce hand-to-hand fighting as they attempt to board enemy galleys
Seeing that the Christian left wing is under pressure, Santa Cruz moves the reserve squadron forward to assist
A few galleys become isolated from Doria's squadron
Uluç Ali abandons attempt to outflank Doria and makes for gap that has opened in Christian line
As Doria's squadron advances, most of his galleys move to the right to counter Uluç Ali's outflanking maneuver
Uluç Ali's squadron attempts to outflank the Christian right wing initially
GULF OF PATRAS
Some Turkish soldiers escape onto the shore
3 CHRISTIAN VICTORY
The Christian left wing traps the Ottoman right against the shore. With the reserve Christian squadron joining in the battle for the center, the Ottoman line finally collapses. A few Ottoman galleys escape but most are captured.
SCROPHA POINT
The galleys on the Christian right wing succeed in pinning the Ottomans' ships against the shore
The collapse of the Ottoman right wing frees up some of Santa Cruz's galleys to join in the battle for the center
Don John's galley is boarded from Ali Pasha's Sultana, but then the tables are turned, the Ottoman flagship captured, and Ali Pasha killed
Two galleasses move up to help prevent threatened breakthrough on the Christian right
Seeing the Ottoman standard cut down from the flagship's mast, the Turkish center collapses
A few Ottoman galleys escape, chiefly those of Uluç Ali
Doria's right wing turns to assist the isolated galleys that had been under attack from Uluç Ali
GULF OF PATRAS