the Bangladesh-Myanmar-India tri-junction area inside the Bandarban region of Bangladesh (UNB 2015).

11 The 'Rakhine Action Plan' is a comprehensive plan that Myanmar government floated in July 2014, and is reportedly in vogue. The Rohingya community believes it is directed against it since it would bar Rohingya subsequently from continuing their legal residency in Rakhine State. Such intentions were evidenced through further illegalization and disenfranchisement attempts by the central government since March 2015, by forcibly confiscating the white cards (the only documentation that a Rohingya usually had to prove their residency) from Rohingya and replacing them with new identification cards. Interestingly, following the announcement of this plan the Myanmar government sent out a three-member team to lobby Western governments and relevant international organisations to accept it as an 'official plan to solve the Rohingya problem' (Norwegian Burma Committee 2015).

12 I base this comment on my attendance at a number of bilateral meetings between Bangladesh and Myanmar border authorities in Cox's Bazar, Teknaf and Maungdaw, between April 2008 to February 2009, and also out of my inspection of documents at the BGB Headquarters in Dhaka later in 2009.

13 Major cases of non-voluntary migration and displacement for Bangladesh affected the tribal people — mostly the Chakma — due to Kaptai Dam project (1978); the tribal and Bengalee people in the 1980s due to insurgency by the 'Shanti Bahini'; and recently, an unidentified number of people who are displaced due to large-scale infrastructure development projects such as the Jamuna Multipurpose Bridge in North Bengal while another large group has been displaced by the natural calamities and other environmental problems at the coastal belt in the south.

14 In one case, in April 2001, the Bangladeshi guards took on a BSF patrol accusing it of deliberately violating the international border with ill intentions, causing huge casualties to the latter. The incident caused a diplomatic spat between the two countries, but did show that the Bangladeshi guards were not indifferent to border violations in general (BBC 2001; Rahman 2013).

15 This view was expressed by Dr. Mahathir Mohammad, former prime minister of Malaysia, at a press conference in Oslo in May 2015.

References

Ahmed, Imtiaz, ed. The Plight of the Stateless Rohingyas: Responses of the State, Society and the International Community. Dhaka: University Press Limited, 2010.

Alexander's Gas & Oil Connections. "Myanmar Pulls Out from Bangladesh Waters". Alexander's Gas & Oil Connections, 10 November 2008. <http://www.