

Spanish squares
The Spanish tercios (large units that were roughly eqivalent to regiments) used the square to good effect during the early battles of the Eighty Years' War (1568–1648) against the Dutch. The square was a combination of pikemen and arquebusiers.