A very simple soup, easy to make and with very few ingredients, this is lifted out of the ordinary by the gentle anise-tang of dill.

zucchini and potato soup

SERVES 4 PREP 10 MINS COOK 15 MINS FREEZE UP TO 3 MONTHS

2 large potatoes, peeled and diced
2 cups hot chicken stock
1 tsp salt
1 tbsp olive oil
3 medium zucchini, peeled, finely diced, or grated
1 onion, peeled, finely diced, or grated white pepper
½ cup heavy cream
1¼ cups milk
small bunch of fresh dill, chopped

1 Place the potatoes into a large, deep saucepan with the hot stock and salt, bring to a boil, and simmer for about 5 minutes, or until tender. Blend with an immersion blender until smooth and return to the saucepan.

2 In another saucepan, heat the olive oil, add the zucchini and onion, and cook over low heat for 2–3 minutes or until slightly softened but not colored. Stir in a dash of the pepper, the cream, milk, and puréed potato broth and simmer gently for 5 minutes, or until the zucchini has softened. Add dill and season to taste. Serve hot.

ZUCCHINI
A welcome addition to many soups, zucchini should be firm, unblemished, feel heavy, and have glossy skin. Avoid purchasing those that are shriveling and soft. Smaller zucchini have the best flavor.
