This thick and creamy soup is perfect for using up leftover turkey, and tastes even richer if you have some homemade turkey stock on hand.

chunky turkey soup

SERVES 4 PREP 15 MINS COOK 30 MINS FREEZE UP TO 3 MONTHS

1 tbsp olive oil
3¾ tbsp butter, softened
1 onion, chopped
1 large potato, peeled, cut into small chunks
2 carrots, cut into small chunks
1 leek, cut into small chunks
2 bay leaves
1 quart (1 liter) turkey or chicken stock, preferably homemade 3 scant tbsp flour
1¾oz (50g) frozen peas
7oz (200g) cooked turkey, cut in chunks big handful of coarsely chopped parsley salt and freshly ground black pepper hot garlic bread, to serve

1 Heat the oil and half of the butter in a large sauté pan. Add the onion and cook for 4–5 minutes until just starting to turn golden. Add the potato, carrots, leek, and bay leaves and cook for a few more minutes over high heat until the vegetables are going golden and sticky on the base of the pan. With the heat still high, pour in the stock, scraping the bottom of the pan so you have a lovely golden-colored stock. Lower the heat, cover with a lid, and simmer for 15 minutes.

2 Work the rest of the butter into the flour with a spoon. Drop this in small pieces into the pan, whisking all the time after each addition with a wire whisk, until you have a thin sauce consistency. Simmer for about 10 minutes to finish cooking the vegetables, adding the peas for the last 2 minutes. Remove the bay leaves.

3 Stir in the turkey and parsley, grind in lots of black pepper, and add salt if needed. Warm through then serve with slices of hot garlic bread.
