

Fungi, such as this bright yellow jelly fungus growing on a fallen tree, are no longer classified as plants. Fungi are genetically closer to animals.

See also: Early theories of evolution • Evolution by natural selection • The role of DNA • A system for identifying all nature's organisms