

A male Baltimore oriole perches on a tree fern in Costa Rica. The species flies north to breed in March and returns to the tropics in August or September.

See also: Evolution by natural selection • Global warming • The Keeling Curve • Ozone depletion • Spring creep