

Marsupials are strongly identified with Australia, yet they evolved in America and are still also found there.

See also: Island biogeography • The distribution of species over space and time • Macroecology • Metapopulations • Biogeography