

Bubbles in an ice core provide a sample of the atmosphere going back centuries. Scientists measure the CO_2 in the trapped air bubbles.

See also: Global warming • The biosphere • Environmental feedback loops • Halting climate change